PHENIX LITERARY SOCIETY. Prayer by Rev. George T. Wilmer, D. D. Address by Charles S. Dod, A. M., master of the preparatory department of the college. His subject was, "Language as an Instrument of Modern Culture." But for the length to which my already too long report has grown I would furnish you with a sketch of Mr. Dod's remarks. They were pronotneed by all who heard them as very fine. One of the members of the Board of Visitors said he had heard Thackeray when in this country, and he considered Mr. Dod's style equal to that of the distinguished English author. All praised the effort. Mr. Dod is possessed of rare scholarly attainments, a fluent pen, and highly imaginative mind. A synopsis of his remarks could not be given without marring the whole, or probably creating a false impression as to his meaning. He did not advocate the study of the dead languages except as a means to a special end-i. e., the cultivation of the mind, and as rendering one betterable to understand his own language; yet he was no opposer of classical education. It is possible Mr. Dod's address may be published.

President J. L. Tallaferro then introduced Mr. C. B. Wilmer, who delivered a creditable address, as final orator, entitled "Edu-Brickell.

President Taliaferro announced that the committee to award a medal to the "best essayist" in the Society had not been able to agree between three of the contestants hence three medals would be awarded. He then resented them to Thomas G. Peachy, of Williamsburg; John Allen Watts, of Roanoke, and William H. N. P. Parker, of Northampton.

Mr. John A. Watts then delivered the valeabout William and dictory of the Society.

Virginia Military Institute Commencement Exercises.

[Reported for the Dispatch.] LEXINGTON, July 3, 1874. At 10 o'clock A. M. the corps of cadets formed on the parade ground, under com mand of Colonel Shipp, and, after listening to the general orders, passed the office of the superintendent, General F. H. Smith, and being joined by the Board of Visitors and Academic Staff, marched to the mess hall. The hall was most elaborately and beautifully decorated with wreaths of ivy and festoons of cedar and flowers. The speech was a very interesting and brief essay, de scriptive of the modes of warfare in the past and what must be the mode in future. In the course of his remarks he alluded to the new mode of charge, introduced by the immortal Lec. The old English charge was made with fixed bayonets and unloaded guns. It remained for him to inaugurate a charge with unfixed bayonets and loaded guns, which were discharged from some commanding point, doing terrible execution The oration was well received. Cadet L. C. Mr. Robert T. Barton, Esq., of Virginia, was then introduced, who addressed the graduating class in behalf of the Board of Visitors. This address was brief and stirring, and listened to with marked attention. The superintendent than announced that a gold medal was conferred on Cadet W. M. Walton for the best essay on "Aim in Life." As a fact worthy of notice, and compli-mentary to the Virginia Military Institute and Virginia students, we have learned from an authoritative source that in a late competitive examination for auxiliaries to the Coast Survey, United States army, the following gentlemen received the appointment in the following order: No. 1, H. W. Blair, a distinguished graduate of the Virginia Military Institute; No. 2, J. R. Baylor, University of Virginia; No. 3, Mr. Sinclair, of Virginia. These examinations were made not only on the ground of attainments in the field, but stant or essential to the pathology of the also on previous preparation and study.

BRENTSVILLE, July 3, 1874. Harvest is nearly over with us, and the farmers generally appear to be well satisfied. The wheat crop, in most instances, will yield well. The oats suffered during the few weeks of dry weather, but are now looking Prince William land has improved to a greater extent than that of any other county in the State since the war. The Virginia Midland road has succeeded in bringing in a good many settlers and establishing them upon their land near Bristow station. It would be of great advantage to owners of large tracts of land to cut them up into small portions. This course has been adopted by the railroad company, and has succeeded admirably. Potomac City, on the Fredericksburg railroad, is growing rapidly. Lots of one-There are two brick-yards there, and they are turning out between them from thirty to

A Richmond Man on His Travels. Editors of the Dispatch .-- I promised your genial Local to send him some "jottings by the way"; so here goes it : First let me begin with "our City by the Sea," Norfolk, which, to a casual observer, is " dead as Hector," but the vast trucking business carried on there at this time is indeed wonderful. nearly 16,000 boxes or crates of vegetables for our friends North-such as potatoes, engumbers, and snaps; and there lay the Elder, another of the Old Dominion Steamship Company's ships, awaiting her turn to bear off perhaps as many more. Besides these, there were large ships for Baltimore and Phitadelphia crowded to their utmost capacity. Norfolk, you have already said, was the third cotton port in the United States. They have two immense cotton pressing machines now, one of which was built at an expense of $60,000, and another being built to cost $40,000. So you may imagine they are making up the cotton trade. Other branches of business are flat.

IN NEW YORK in every department of trade great inactivity prevails. Some little business is going on in Wall street. Speculation not lively, how-we next come to. It is, indeed, a beautiful city; other matters prevented me from sight seeing. It has the appearance of a live city, although they have the chronic complaint of try. Yale College has just ended a brilliant commencement. The Legislature is in sesmen; not many orators have they. They are paid $300 per session, and, I am told, work when they have any business on hand, adjourn and go home. Our old townsman, C. D. Yale, is there as large as life. Governor case from the domain of mysticism and Ingersoll I saw promenading; he is a plainlooking gentleman, apparently fifty-five or sixty years of age, unostentatious, and highly esteemed. is the busiest place yet that I have seen. I have no time to visit the many places of interest in this old city. I think the Yankees here are the politest that I have met. There are a great many very handsome public buildings here that cannot be surpassed in this country. The State-House will be magmificent when completed, which will be at no distant day. Finally, let me say that the country people all along this great route are busy with their farms. Our farmers would call them "patches," but there is nothing but a bright, green spot, flourishing vegetation from New York to Hartford. More "ON THE WING."

of Baltimore, the highest authority as to by- and prevent the atmosphere from being poldrophobia, repudiates the theory of Dr. Hammond, of New York.

[From the Baltimore Sun, 4th.] Hydrophobia-Professor Smith on Dr. Hammond's Theory. Having publicly expressed in relation to hydrophobia opinions, the accuracy of which has been called in question, I beg leave to further vindicate their accuracy. My friend Professor Hammond is a highly distinguished member of our profession, and an error sunctioned by him is the more likely to be productive of mischief. Professor Hammond will not and does not assert that he is the first that has called attention to the occasional lesion of the brain and spinal marrow, which occurs as a sequel of this disease. In a work as common as that of Druitt is the following: "The morbid appearances most frequently found are congestion of brain and spinal marrow, and effusion of serum, sometimes blood. Sometimes blood is extravasated around the couical portion of the cord." Affirming this, we might quote Gross, Holms, and, indeed, almost all surgical authors of high authority. On the other hand, almost all writers concur in stating that these lesions are not condisease. These statements are made by those whose dissections have been conducted with precision not inferior to that of Dr. Ham-Moral Philosophy.—W. H. I have often witnessed, a slight inflummation occurs in the bitten part, the scar reddens, tches, and becomes tumid. A narrow red line is seen extending from the scar towards he trunk. This is termed the incubation or zymosis, and is analogous to the local affection, or zymosis, by which small-pox, vaccine, and syphilis are introduced into the system. If when a child is vaccinated we allow the point to which the virus is applied to be washed or chafed immediately after, no effect will result. The same occurs in the inoculation of small-pox. In the communication of syphilis it is universally admitted that, although some think the poison applied is sometimes at once absorbed into the blood, generally a small ulcer, with hard base, is first caused by the poison, and from this the virus s absorbed into the blood and displays itself in any part of the system. All practitioners are aware that if the moment the minute chancre occurs a caustic, commonly the nitric acid, is applied, the occurrence of the constitutional disease will be prevented. Now the venom of hydrophobia is precisely analogous to this, only, happily, the period of incubation of hatching is much longer, furnishing ample opportunity to arrest the disease. If a nerve transmitted the morbid impression it would be instantaneous, darting along the nervous cord like a spark of electricity, and no remedy applied to the part would produce the least effect. Professor Hammond, it is well known, is a specialist-his speciality being the pathology of the nervous system. This leads him. perhaps, to over-estimate the action of the nervous system in the production of disease, and also the effects of remedies, as electric ity in the cure of it.

The learned professor belongs to a sect of pathologists termed the "solidists," who flourished about a century ago, and who believed that the fluids (blood, &c.,) had little or nothing to do with the production and display of disease. If Professor Hammond is correctly reported in the public prints, he ascribes far less importance to local means, excision, cautery, &c., than do we who regard hydrophobia as the product of a blood poison.

If he is correctly reported, he expects great benefit from electricity as a remedial agent, but surely, if applied locally, it can only hasten the zymosis by which the poison is introduced into the system, and if employed after the constitutional disease is established, it would have no other effect than to increase nervous excitement.

But facts are worth more than pages of speculation, and they prove that although we have thus far accomplished nothing toward the cure of this terrible malady when developed, we can rely with great confidence on preventive measures, and save many a valuable life by prompt recourse to them.

I have myself treated with the cautery more than a hundred cases of persons bitten by rabid dogs. In some cases I have cauterized the wounds of five or six persons bitten by the same dog. In not a single instance have I witnessed the development of the disease in these cases.

Mr. Youatt, who is the very highest authority on this subject, has been bitten seven times by rabid animals, and used no other preventive means than aboution and cautery. He has also treated no less than four hundred persons bitten, and with success in every instance.

There is another preventive expedient that strikes still deeper at the root of the evil: Kill every son of a-dog in the State of Maryland. N. R. Sміти. of Maryland.

The Source of Typhoid Fever and its Remedy.

The existence of typhoid fever is very common, especially in civilized communities. Its frequently fatal termination and its long and distressing developments, even in case of recovery, constitute it a disease Imagine the Wyanoke (no small vessel) in case of recovery, constitute it a disease which is but a little less dreaded than its taking to New York the last week in June kindred scourges, cholera and small-pox. In view of its character, investigations as to its origin are of universal interest. It is not a disease which is limited to any particular class, as is the case with some others. It is a visitant of the crowded tenement-house, and of the palace. It frequents both country town and city; and makes its appearance indifferently in the isolated farm-house and upon the avenues of deusely populated centres. And yet one would scarcely believe that this dread complaint is simply and solely the production of uncleanliness; that it has no higher origin than dirt; that it is in no way a Providential dispensation further than being an attempt on the part of Providence-if Providence have a hand in the matter at allto warn men and women that they must breathe pure air, drink pure water, and keep themselves free from the contamination of tilth. In the Public Health, an English publication, it is positively asserted as the couclusion of long and exhaustive investigations that typhoid fever is "directly and positively preventable," and this prevention is a matter of the atmost simplicity. "Filth," says although they have the chronic complaint of "dullness," and it is an epidemic in this coun- or both, is the sole, simple, and removable cause" of typhoid fever, and the removal of "fitth in such a way that neither air nor wasion. Both branches are composed of solid ter shall be polluted thereby means the extinction of typhoid fever."

The discovery of the cause and cure of this scourge removes the duty of preventing the spread or even the existence of this displaces it in the hands of sanitary authorities in general, and in the keeping of every individual in particular. The discovery amounts nate typhoid fever.

For popular guidance there are three or four points which may be elaborated. They

1. Drinking-water must be absolutely free from the drainage of night-soil and other impurities. 2. The excrementory discharges of patients suffering from typhoid fever will communicate the disease, and hence they must be at once disinfected. 3. The air from sewers and water-closets must not be permitted to escape so as to be breathed, for it is a fruitful source of the origin and for the spread of the disease. These three points thoroughly attended to by every family will reduce the existence of typhoid fever to the minimum. The action of the individual should be supplemented, in the case of towns, by measures which will We are glad to see that Dr. N. R. Smith, cleanse the gutters, secure perfect sewerage, luted by the admission into it of noxious vapors. In the case of farm-houses, the great cause of typhoid fever is found in the pollution of the air and the drinking water by emanations and drainage from the barn-yard. In fine, typhoid fever, like cholera and small-pox, is simply the indignant and forcible protest of nature against uncleanliness. Let every one breathe perfectly pure air, drink perfectly pure water-let people completely disassociate themselves from filth-

and typhoid fever will become a disease of
